casso Donating Hundreds Early Works to Barcelona

Pablo Picasso

By Andreas Freund

PARIS, March 11 (NYT).-News that Pablo Picasso has donated between 800 and 900 of his imest early works to a museum in Barcelona stunned, dismayed and mystified art circles here

The donation became official yesterday when representative of Picasso notified the mayor of Barcelona of the painter's intention of transferring the works to that city's Berenguer de

No estimate of the value of the gift was available here, except that it represented a multi-million-dollar fortune. There was no possibility of a more precise evaluation pending availability of a list of the works.

Reports received here were contradictory. One said the donation comprised the master's Spanish period. Another report said the works esented the best of his production up to 1917, in which case it would also include some his most celebrated Cubist production done in Paris after he had moved there in 1908.

It did appear established, bowever, that the collection contains a series of early paintings once given by the painter to his mother, and two important large canvases. "First Commu-nion" and "Science and Charity," which figured in the first turn-of-the-century Picasso exhibi-

Experts Mystified

While the donation was described as made up of "drawings, paintings and engravings," there was no clue to how many there were of each. The consensus among experts was that there was probably a majority of drawings and a high proportion of paintings, but very few engravings, since Picasso by all accounts made little use of that technique in his earlier years. Experts were mystified by another aspect of the donation. How was it that Picasso could have held on for so many years to so many of his .early works? It is widely known that Picasso (Continued on Page 2, Col. 3)

Cambodian Mobs Sack Viet Cong, Hanoi Embassies

PHNOM PENH, March 11 (UPI).-More than 20,000 enrage Cambodian students and workers sacked the North Vietnamese and Viet Cong Embassies here today, violently underscoring their demand that Hanoi and Viet Cong troops get out of Cambodia Throngs estimated by police at more than 20,000 first broke into the embassy building of the Viet Cong's Provisional Revolutionary Government, burning several parked cars near the building and tossing smashed furniture and diplomatic files into the street.

The demonstrators tore down yellow and blue flag and replaced it by Cambodian colors.

The demonstrators, apparently ngered by increased encroachments on Cambodian sovereignty by North Vietnamese and Viet Cong troops fighting in neighboring South Vietnam, then ransacked the Hanoi embassy building. The mob spared an adjoining villa inhabited by Hanoi diplomats when the latter threatened to defend themselves with hand grenades.

The demonstrators also burned ese and Cambodian reading "Go in Phnom Penh were organized by home, dirty Viet Cong, you want persons seeking to alienate Cam-to Vietnamize Cambodia." According to reliable official sources, the Hanol and Viet Cong diplomats who fled from the emassies before they were attacked were first given refuge in municipal police stations, and later sought shelter in several friendly embassies in Phnom Penh.

(NYT) .- On Jan. 3, 1969, a fortnight before Richard M. Nixon's inauguration, Daniel P. Moynihan sent a memorandum to the President-elect in which be said that "the Negro lower class must be dissolved" by transforming it "into a stable work-ing-class population."

Mr. Moynihan, who then had the title of assistant for urban affairs, is now a White House counselor in the same field with cabinet rank

He said in the memo that this transformation of what he estimated at "almost half the total Negro population" would be "the work of a generation." Nevertheless, Mr. Moynihan said, it was essential to social stability and elemental justice that "the low-income, marginally employed, poorly educated, disorganized slum-dwellers" should have the opportunity to become "truck drivers, mail carriers, assembly-line workers: people with dignity, purpose, and, in the United States, 2 very good standard of living indeed." He continued:

"Common justice and common sense demands that this be done. It is the existence of this lower class, with its nigh rate of crime, dependency; and general disorderliness that causes nearby whites (that is to say working-class whites, the liberals are all in the suburbs) to fear Negroes and to seek by various ways to avoid and constrain them. It is this group that black extremists use to threaten white society with the prospects of mass arson and pillage. It is also this group that terrorizes and plunders the stable elements of the Negro community-trapped by white prejudice in the slums, and forced to live cheek by towl with a murderous alum population. Take the urban lower class out of the picture and the Negro cultural revolution becomes an exciting and constructive development." Six days after this memo was sent, on Jan. 9, Mr. Moyni-

IN yesterday's editions of the International Herald Tribune the text was published of presidential adviser Daniel P. Moynihan's controversial "benigh neglect" memorandum to President Nizon on racial problems in the United States. Two earlier memoranda to Mr. Nixon on the same subject, written more than a year ago, became available to The New York Times over the past weekend. These may generate as much controversy as the most recent PRESIDENTIAL press secretary Ronald Ziegler yesterday passed

Mr. Ziegler termed it "unfortunate that in certain instances, members of the President's staff cannot communicate to the President without appearing in public prints."

France Unveils Low-Cost Missile For Use Against Low-Flying Planes

PARIS, March 11 (UPI).—The French national aerospace upany unveiled a new low-cost misalle yesterday designed specifically to knock out low-flying aircraft.

Gen. Jean Crepin, vice-president of the company, announced at a news conference the Harpon missile, cold for only 10,000 francs ($1,800), had an accurate range of 1,640 feet, and could be mounted on almost anything, a truck, a tank, or dug into the ground.

The launching turret for the missile sold for 300,000 france ($54,500).

A version also has been made to be fired from small sea craft, he eald. The Harpon—a modified anti-tank missile—has an automatic infra-red guiding system.

Gen. Crepin claimed that if the Egyptians had had Harpons during the June 1967 six-day war with Israel, the Israelis would not have been able to succeed with their low-altitude attacks on Egyptian airfields. The cost in Israeli planes would have been too great, he said. "It is so easy to handle and maneuver that even a five-star general can shoot it with excellent results after a half hour's training," Gen. Crepin quipped.

Cambodian Acts Against Reds Reflect Radical Policy Shift

By Stanley Karnow

HONG KONG, March 11 (WP).—The assaults against the North Vietnam and Viet Cong Embassies in Phnom Penh today appear to reflect a radical change from Cambodia's formerly close links with the Vienamese Communists.

The demonstrations, undoubtedly organized with government sanction, represent growing Cambodian indignation against the virtual occupation of parts of the country by North Viet-namese and Viet Cong froops. That the attacks against the Communist legations occurred during Prince Norodom Sinanouls's absence from Cambodia may also indicate open opposi-tion against the chief of state. who has consistently favored friendly ties with Hanol and the Viet Cong. Sihanouk was in Paris following medical treatment. A relative. Sisowath Sirik Matak hes been in charge of the government since Sibanouk's departure in January. The extent of Vietnamese Communist infiltration in Cambodia was disclosed last month by Ocur Traluch, a member of the Phnom Penh national assembly, who claimed to have investigated the situation. Speaking at a national assembly session, Mr. Traluch esti-mated that as many as 60,000 North Vietnamese and Viet Cong troops are currently inside Cambodia. Nibble Away

He said that the Communists occupy two-thirds of northeastern Ratanakiri Province, adjacent to the South Vietnamese highlands, and operate as well in Svay Rieng, Prey Veng, Kampot and Kandal Provinces. "Despite their professions of sincere support," Mr. Traluch said, "our foreign friends have deliberately nibbled away at our national territory." further alleged that the Communists in Ratanakiri Province have built houses and planted crops "as if this were their own country," and accused them of mobilizing the Khmer, local mountain tribesmen, to fight the Cambodian Army. A common Communist tactic. Mr. Traluch went on, is to open fire across the border at allied forces in South Vietnam and then flee, leaving Cambodian frontier villages, exposed to retaliatory shellings.

Mr. Trainch implied that weapons distributed to Cambodian self-defense and militia forces were sold to the Communists, thereby leaving frontier zones unprotected.

Reds Train Students

Describing their activities in Phnom Penh, the deputy said that Communists were training Vietnamese stutents and taxing Vietnamese mer-chants in the capital. About a half million Vietnamese live in Cambodia.

While he consistently affirms his support for the Communist cause in Vietnam, Sihanouk has become increasingly alarmed at the pervasive North Vietnamese and Viet Cong presence in Cambodia.

Most sources agree that the Cambodian Army, numbering only about 35,000 men, is incapable of coping with the Vietcountry. Poorly equipped, especially since Sihanouk's rejection of U.S. economic and military ald in 1963, the army is reported to be heavily involved in corruption in order to subsist. In the estimation of some observers familiar with Cambodia, the anti-Communist demon-stration in Phnom Penh today may also mirror the rising dissatisfaction of youths with Sibanouke rule A serious problem has been the lack of employment opportunities for educated youths as a conse-quence of lagging economic A key question at the moment, then, is whether Sihanouk will attempt to restore Cambodia's intimate ties with Hanol and the Viet Cong-or whether events have gone too far for such a move.

Right Decision on Rhodesia

The United States has taken the honorable course in deciding to close its consulate in Rhodesia. It was not an easy decision to make-for reasons that have nothing to do with the arguments of American racists or the price of chrome that now must be imported from Soviet Russia.

In general, Washington recognizes de facto governments and maintains diplomatic representation wherever possible. Departures from this policy on political or moral grounds have rarely brought positive results. There is no use pretending that virtual diplomatic isolation will appreciably hasten the end of white minority rule in Rhodesia.

The mandatory sanctions invoked long ago by the United Nations Security Council probably hurt Rhodesian blacks and neighboring Zambia more than they weakened Premier Smith's regime. However, as in the matter of the consulate, the United States had no decent alternative; in both cases it supported the least unpalatable among available policies. If the United States had stood alone in the Security Council and vetoed sanctions, it would have told the world there was no long-run threat to peace and security in Africa in the attempt of 225,000 whites to perpetuate and even extend their domination over 4.5 million blacks. This position is not tenable.

Had Washington maintained its consulate in Salisbury it would have invited the euspicion that it was trying a double game in Africa and undercutting the UN after voting for sanctions. Indeed, the administration should have followed Britain's lead and severed ties last July after the white rulers of Rhodesia had adopted a constitution designed to expand racial discrimination and further entrench minority rule.

Secretary of State Rogers obviously was deeply impressed during his recent trip to Africa by the strong feelings of African leaders on this issue and the necessity for action to remove their doubts about the American position. He has accompanied the decision to close the consulate with a statement emphatically recommitting this country to the cause of majority rule in Africa.

A Justice in Search of a Case

soliciting cases, but that's what Warren E. Burger did in a short opinion Monday. After complaining a little that the Supreme Court is shorthanded these days and after challenging come of the nonsense that has been spread about its school desegregation decisions, he went on to urge that somebody present a good case so that the justices can resolve some of the questions about desegregation they have never answered. We don't know how the rest of the chief justice's colleagues on the court feel about this but there are some questions to which an answer now would be helpful.

Generally speaking, the Supreme Court has left almost all of the problems about school desegregation in the hands of the lower courts since that day in 1954 when it directed that desegregation proceed with all deliberate speed. Once in a while, it has taken a school case when a particular and usually a rather narrow, issue presented itself. But its policy of leaving the implementation of desegregation to the trial courts and the courts of appeal has resulted in some conflicting decisions on such questions as racial balance, busing and the drawing of school zones.

Many of these conflicts grow out of two threads that appear in the court's original school desegregation decision and have been developed into full-blown theories. One is that the court meant only to par racial sification in the schools; that is, that a school district must be neutral on racial assignments once it has overcome fully the discrimination its earlier bias had created. The other is that the court intended to require that each public school must have substantial numbers of children of all races where those children exist; that is, that the inequality of separate education requires the states to take whatever steps are necessary

The arguments about racial balance and

U.S. Consular Pullout

It is rare for a chief justice to go around the reassignment of students to achieve it grow directly out of the conflict between these two theories. And it is one which the court could clarify now if it would. The other two popular arguments these days, about unitary echool systems and busing to achieve them, are somewhat but not directly related. The chief justice pointed out something which both the friends and foes of the court seem to be ignoring when he said it had defined what a unitary system is when it ordered an end to dual systems. The court said a unitary system was one "within which no person is to he effectively excluded from any school because of race or color." The meaning of this, however, is somewhat colored by which of the two arguments outlined above you accept, It can be read to mean that every school in a unitary system must be integrated or that no child can be barred hecause of racc from the school he would normally attend if his race were ditferent. The husing question in this context is quite different, with all deference to Sen. Stennis's feeling that it isn't, since in almost every situation a unitary system of either kind results in less busing of students in the South than a dual system did. .

Thus, while we still think it is a little peculiar for the chief justice to solicit cases to raise these questions and publicly urge his brothers to hear them, we agree with his conclusion that they ought to be answered. And we sympathize with his complaint about the vacant seat on the court which led him not to argue that they ought to be ments giving the precise number of decided this spring. Not since the Civil War men fighting there and defining has a seat on the court remained vacant aslong as has the one resigned by Justice Fortas last May. The resulting burden on the other justices has been tremendous. The fault for permitting this to happen, however, rests with the man who appointed the chief justice, since it is the quality of the men President Nixon has attempted to put there that has delayed their confirmation.

Art of Backing Into the Future

By James Reston

Nixon administration in action these days is a little like watching a good defensive football team. Mixon isn't very exciting, but he keeps the opposition off balance and he has mastered the art of the tactical retreat.

Two actions in recent days ilhistrate the point. When Secretary of the Treasury Kennedy was charged with approving a ruling that would have meant a milliondollar bonama for a shipping company formerly headed by a White wait more than a few hours before seeing that the ruling was suspend-

He waited longer before acting to spike the criticism that he was fighting a concealed war in Laos, the extent and the limits of their military activities.

These protective moves to correct wrong decisions or dangerous situations don't always satisfy his critics—as they have not in either of the above cases-but they limit the damage and keep the infection (or the truth, according to your view) from spreading.

The Long Bomb This, in fact, is almost becoming the trade mark of this administration. Occasionally, it will grab the ball and throw the long bomb, as in its imaginative forward move on the welfare front, but usually it is on the defensive, backing into the tuture, watching its flanks and staving off disaster.

WASHINGTON. - Watching the son, who tended to get stubborn when he was challenged, and gave up nothing until he had to give up everything, including the White Rouse. Nixon avoids sharp confrontations when he is vulnerable and retreats to more tenable ground, where he proclaims he has just made a spectagular advance.

This is what he did, under pressure, when he began pulling out of Vietnam, cutting the detense budget, limiting the anti-ballistic missile program, reducing U.S. commitments overseas cutting the Court; and lowering his voice.

Dependent on Aid

The pressure has worked so far because Kenya and Uganda depend heavily on British aid. But there are signs that both governments are losing patience.

The newspaper of Uganda's ruling party said recently that Britain was in effect "renting Uganda" to keep its Asians in. Laotian Conflict There is every reason to believe that President Nixon has already resigned himself to facing a earlous deterioration of the military situation in Laos in the coming weeks and months. He will cope with it, but with means of his choice; with bombs and not with American bayonets. It should be remembered that Mr. Nixon never questioned the correctness of U.S. military involvement in South Vietnam. He merely helieves that his predecessor in the White House committed the tactical error of bogging down GIs in rice paddies. He makes it a point of not committing such an error in the jungle of the Plaine des Jarres. But he is not ready, for all that, to surrender Laos to the North Vietnamese without firing a shot.

to have been vindicated by the later disclosure of activities that led him to resign from the court. But if the Fortes fillbuster was wrong in principle, then it remained wrong despite subsequent disclosures, and in that case it would be just as wrong to use that means to thwart the Carswell nomination.

Counting on Nixon

Hence, some senators who felt strongly at the time that it was improper to use the fillbuster sgainst Mr. Fortes are now wrestling with themselves over the question of using it against Judge Carswell. This is a little more than the usual matter of principle vs. expedience: since the Caravell nomination may affect not just the judicial course but the public standing of the Supreme Court, for those whe believe deeply in the court's high place in the Amer- or of which it may not greep the lean system, it is more nearly one full consequences; and even in such principle against another. But even the politics of the question is issues can a minority's frustration

Mr. Fortas decided to withdraw the President's appointive powers after closure failed in his case; and the idea of the anti-Carswell group is that, in a similar situan. President Nixon would withdraw the pending nomination. They hope that even he may have been dismayed by Judge Carswell's dismal lack of qualification, and that he would finally put forward a more respectable choice—though no doubt still a Southern con-But would Mr. Nixon follow that script? In the first place, it is most unlikely that he would withdraw the Carswell nomination before it actually reached a vote particularly after his humiliation on the earlier Haynsworth nomination. If he persisted in supporting Judge Carswell he would force the filibuster into e long-time proposition that sooner or later would collabse particularly as it began to hold up more and more unrelated issues and legislation. In that case the filibuster would only have delayed the question, and might even benefit Mr. Nixon with a publie that would see him as politically frustrated in his constitutional right to appoint Supreme Court That is politics. The question of principle, for some, is that if unlimited debate in the Senate has any justification, it is in preventing an impatient and unwise majority from rushing into ill-conceived action it may not fully understand cases, only on the most important of the majority-to say nothing of judiciary.

-be justified. No more than in the Fortes illibuster, therefore, does the case of Judge Carswell seem to justify resort to unlimited debate on such grounds.

Guide to a Dilemma To others, the question of principle is that if, as they contend unlimited debate is not justified under any circumstances and ought to be abolished from Benste procedures, then how can they resort to it in the Canwell case, to serve their own political beliefs? One guide to such a dilemma may lie in consideration of the basic issue against Judge Carswell. It is not really his insensitivity to the race question; some Southern nominees of similar views could be confirmed easily. Besically, the case against Mr. Nixon's non is that he is totally without distinction, without any apparent quality of mind or breadth of experience that would make him an appropriate or useful member of the highest court. Nothing in the Carawell record, moreover, suggests the capacity to rise above his past performance.

Perhaps that justifies a philosophy that one should use any old stick to kill a snake. But what it really demands is not a fillibuster by a small group of determined and concerned men but that all senstors, Southern and conservative in particular, who value a government of check and balance should rise to the issue and rebuke an executive who asks the legislative branch to consent to the demeaning of the

Nina Froud Is Stretching Her Time To Meet Demands of Several Careers

By Naomi Barry ONDON.-How many hours in a day? How many days in a week? How many existences in a life?

Nina Froud seems to have found the secret of stretching time and it allows her to do at least half the things she wants. At the opening of the Royal Court Theater's splendid production of "Uncle Vanya," stunning petite creature in a black theater suit with a white mink collar, stood surrounded by a gaggle of London's bright young things.

"That's Nina Froud. She did the new translation from the Russian." Critics have pointed out that the translation gave Paul Scofield scope for a new interpretation of Vanya.

This week, her 21st cook-book, "Meat Dishes of the World," was published. She writes cookbooks at night. "They're very good too," said the critical Lee Penrose, wife Sir Roland Penrose, who is the most talented non-profes-

SWITZERLAND

Reassuring chalet architecture at the new ski resort in Anxère.

By Hebe Dorsey

NZERE Switzerland, March A 11.—Anzère is a brand new man-made ski resort that combines today's modern comfort with the charm of yesterday.

Located on the north valley of the Rhône, on the other side of Crans-sur-Sierre, it's spread on a sunny 4,900-foot plateau in the Bernese Alps. In clear weather, the mountain range is spectacular with both the Mont crowning the horizon.

Founded three years ago by a banker, Philippe Denis, and an architect, Jean Hentsch, Anzare, unlike many new ski resorts, has nothing of the startling and somewhat dismal huge concrete-block approach. Instead, Mr. Hentsch has retained the reassuring, Swiss chalet, slanted-roof architecture but interiors are completely modern. In the village center is a double row of shopping alleys. It's wonderfully quiet because all the cars drive in underground passageways.

The site was selected and warmly recommended by ski instructor Plerre Gutknecht, former bodyguard of King Leonold of Belgium, who used to spend a lot of time at Cranssur-Sierre.

"While skiing at Crans," Mr. Gutknecht said, "I often won-dered why nobody did anything with that beautiful piece of

Old Charm at A New Swiss Ski Resort

The founders started with $6,000. The resort soon had lion capital. At this moment, there are 3,000 beds, five hotels and pensions, six restaurants, a swimming pool, a skating rink and a number of boutiques. Eventually, Anzère's promoters hope to have 8,000 beds, but that will be the maximum because they want to keep the resort attractively, small. In the long run, they will create satellite resorts, to cope with the weekend crowds, but they don't believe in letting Anzère get out of proportion. Technically speaking, the slopes are the best for ski de fond (cross country), Mr. Gutknecht said, and will be the center of the next, 1978, ski Olympics. Anzère also has a ski bob run, a sport that's becoming increasingly popular in Europe. The ski bob can be compared to a small bicycle on skis and riding one is not too unlike horseback riding. You have to wear ski boots attached to ski tips and equipped with metallic spurs. If the machine gets out of band, all you have to do is stick your heels into the snow.

Although the weak at heart can crawl down the mountain, ski bob can be a daredevil experi-ence, with the experts going as fast as 105 miles an hour.

Minimum Publicity Anzère has been leunched with a minimum of publicity and a maximum of care. The girl in charge of promotion is Princess Catherine de Croy, an ettractive brunette whose enthusiasm would make a snow fan out of a kitten. Her idea is to make Anzère chic but not

The center of attraction is the Hotel des Masques, which has a cheerful lounge room with whitewashed walls, dark wood ceiling and a cafe ou latt suede couch around a bright-copper open fire. Last weekend, Princess de Croy put together a group of bankers and stock-brokers for a ski competition, The winner was American banker Daniel Deeter, from California.

To make it a party, Catherine also had Prince and Princess Michel of Greece, Sebran and Lia de Rohan Chabot, Marthe de la Rochefoucauld, Chantal d'Audiffret and Michal Paissel, the Tibetan explorer.

Prince Michel, who recently scored a fair success with a book of memolis, was already working on his second book. Scribbling furiously in a black notebook, he said. Twe been keeping a diary for the last 13

To prove he means it, Barry boasts a collection of some 300 rings, many of them set with, diamonds. He may leave the big rocks to Liz Taylor, but Barry is in a class with Henry VIII. who used to load every knuckle of every fingerthumbs included-with gems.

The pop singer is less ostentatious about it. He keeps a mere handful of rings at home, and the rest sate in a bank vault. They're all husky male models, with heavy gold mount-

"Partly, I collect rings as an investment," he explains. "But anyway, I always liked jewelry, and in this business you gotta have something to do in your spare time or you're bored to death." He designs some of his own rings, collects others

When Barry started in the singing business he was 9 years old and his earnings would hardly have purchased a Woolworth rhinestone. The other Bee Gees, "my twin brothers (Robin and Maurice), were 6 when we started harmonizing in the theaters on Saturdays, and they gave us a shilling aplece a week; we got sixpence pocket money and thought we was rich," he recalls.

Designed by two leading Belgian architects, Jean Polak and Rene Stapels, the $20 million store has an austere facade of preformed concrete, articulated in vertical bands of varying widths. The only windows in the five-story building are in a restaurant and in the top-floor administrative offices. Concealed openings in the facade are connected to the ventiletion and sir-conditioning systems and also give access to fire fighting equipment.

A sprinkler system, which had never been required by the city until the disaster of May, 1967, was installed throughout the building, as are smoke detactors, emergency exits, and are used exclusively in the in-teriors, which were designed by two American firms, Raymond Loewy Associates and Snaith,

The accent is on efficiency, not luxury, although Innovation will probably carry higher quality merchandise than its neighboring sister store, Bon Marché, which it acquired several months ago. Instead of a sprawling food department there is an area with gourmet foods and prepared specialties Fashion floors are organized into small boutiques, with familiar English and American names such as Fifth Avenue. Lady Tiffany, Park Lane, and University Shop.
Signs and directories are in French and Flemish, but Franglais is the language of the marketplace, as seen in Le Do-It-Yourself, Le Bath Shop, Le Sleep Shop, Le Garden Shop, Le Repair Shop, Le Quick Bar, and Selfinno, a self-service calateria, Haute cuisine remains French in Le Pinistère, a res-terrant that will be open on Sundays for several hours and is reached by a direct elevator from the street. A fine art gallery offers a good selection of original prints, and an auditorium is set up as a small "cultural center" for exhibitions and conferences. The area will be served by two new metro stations.

Canse of the fire, one of the worst in Brussels' history, was never determined. It occurred during promotion of American but an investigation falled to imcover anti-American sabotage. The old building, constructed like most turn-ofthe century department stores well, was consumed by flames in 20 minutes.

Today; the sense of tragedy has lessened, but a sober tone is being carefully maintained! for the inaugural period. Flowers and champagne were '2 omitted from the official opening last evening. And the 700 were told that a donation had; been made instead to the Red Cross. . .

Gas Gains a Certain Glow For Long-Term Portfolios

By Robert Metz

NEW YORK (NYT). - Try this out on your long-term investment portfolio. The United States is running out of its favorite non-automotive fuel:

natural gas. In the 15-year period of 1954 through 1968, gas reserves were growing at a rate of only 2.1 percent a year against a rise in consumption of 5.3 percent a year. Consumption's current rate of increase is 8 percent a

As a result, the reserve ratio fell from 29 years of gas sup-plies in 1954 to 14.8 years in Each passing year is trimming about another year's reserves from that figure. Natural gas is popular be cause it is easy to handle and easy to use, because it has been in ample domestic supply up to now, because it has a low pollution factor and because it carries a relatively low price tag for its heat value. Incentive Low

But there is little incentive to find new supplies at the low price of about 18 cents a thousand cubic feet that southern Louisiana gas brings in interstate commerce. So major producing states such as Louisiana and Texas have been selling gas inside those states at 24 cents a thousand cnbic feet. Thus what incentive exists is intrastate. There is not enough incentive to add to reserves. A contributing factor to the lowincentive situation was the recent reduction in the depletion allowance for gas and oil, to 22 percent from 27 1/2 percent.

Where will gas come from in the future? It can be imported in liquefied form at higher cost from foreign sources-and incidentally, paid for by dollars the government would like to keep at home.

It can be recovered through atomic explosions - but not without danger of some radioactive pollution and a sustained outcry from conservation groups. It can be given price incentives by the Federal Power Commission, which so far has been more concerned with making gas a low-cost fuel.

It can be imported in huge quantities from Canada, if both governments are willing, but not im sufficient quantity to overcome the projected gap. Not in Logic .

These thoughts are from Charles Maxwell of Cyrus J. Lawrence & Sons. This ebullient though somewhat pessimistic analyst believes that the answer lies not in the logical solution but elsewhere. "Price incentives from government are so obviously the way to solve the problem that it is probably unlikely that it will go that way." he says. "I think it will be five years before we see the bottom and so we'll have a shortage or crisis until 1980. If no action is taken now or if only partial incentives are given there will be a deeper crisis lasting longer. The net result could be panic hikes in natural gas prices in the years ahead without government price incentives." Overail, "We think Canadian producers are a good bet."

Is time running out on peak returns from corporate bonds?

We advise you not to wait until tomorrow.

Tomorrow is another day. A drop in interest rates will mean that today's high returns of 8%, 9% or morealong with current opportunities for capital gainswon't be around anymore.

We think that now is the time to buy good quality corporate bonds-and that if you buy now, you can look forward to high returns in the years ahead.

If you're looking for "now" investments, send for our report, "Opportunities in Bonds." Just use the coupon below. Or ask for a complimentary copy at your local Bache office. But do it now. "Opportunities" like this don't wait.

Institutions are invited to send for this report.

for US $500 or more give you a guaranteed, fixed return. Year after year. So, our 24-year U.S.I.P. Growth Bond pays 1114 % compounded annually. For 24 years. Which is unlike some people. Who promise you the moon. Take your money. And then conveniently lower their interest rates.

U.S.LP. takes money too seriously to play games with it. And taking care! of your money entails an even greater responsibility than taking care of our vertible currency. Have full capital protection. Guaranteed growth. Pay no sales charges or U.S. taxes. And nobody has ever lost a penny with U.S.L.P. Just circle your choice below

At one table, however, East started South on the road to defeat by a farsighted falsecard. At the first trick he played the ace on dummy's queen instead of making the standard play of the king. There was no danger of misleading West, for the position would be revealed quickly if West had held a singleton. In the actual position South ruffed the ace and was left with the impression that West held the club king.

The heart finesse was taken at the second trick and East made the diabolical return of the club five. South should have discarded a spade with the idea of discarding another spade later on the club jack, but he succumbed to the temptation of ruffing.

The gift, alas, is un-evenly appreciated. Established teams in the National Hockey League, New York, Boston, and especially rambunctions Chicago, regularly outdraw basketball, and their roistering fans happily shower the ice with pennies and dead fish. The meeting never happened. At two o'clock in the morning, AL president Joe Cronin telephoned burried to Tampa from as far as at each other.

It was the calling of the Tampa meeting that never took place that was another example of the functioning of the geniuses who help to make major-league baseball the world's worst-run big business.

One month ago, there wasn't supposed to be a Tampa meeting. On Feb. 11, the AL club owners met and Cronin announced that all was now well with Seattle. The league agreed to advance the ownership $650,000 to help pay the interest on a $2.5 million bank loan and other obligations, and said everything was now in order in Seattle Cronin even installed an old and seasoned baseball man, former Yankee general manager Roy Hamey, to boss the new show in Seattle. But in the succeeding weeks, the clob owners began to bear disturbing reports from Hamey. Things didn't look great and more than the league's $650,000 loan might be needed to keep the franchise afloat.

Seattle fans, dubious about the whole business, weren't buying all those season tickets. The Seattle club treasury got an awful jolt from the long uncertainty of the team's fate and the talk of a move to Milwaukee or Dallas-Fort Worth The radio sponsors who had paid the club $850,000 last year used their options to negotiate the price down to $250,000, a $600,000 blow to a club aiready a baseball mendicant. Hes the Votes

The vote to give Seattle a reprieve last month was 10 to 2, Short and the White Sox owner, John Allen, casting the minority ballots. "I think now the rest of the owners are beginning to see our point, and it could be 10-2 the other way," said Short. Nine votes are required for a franchise shift.

The Reds also have attack, with strong accent on power.

On the pitching side, the rotation will be headed by Jim Maloney. Other likely starters are Jim Merritt, Gary Nolan, Tony Cloninger and Camilo Pascual Also in the running ara Jim McGlothlin from the Angels and Ray Washburn from tha Cards. Also in contention are rookles Wayne Simpson and Vern Geishert. On the relief side, there is Wayne Granger, whose 90 1969 appearances broka all records; Clay Carroll and Al Jackson, not strongly sup-ported at this stage. This department is a question mark. It could be strong, just so-eo. Johnny Bench, the best young catcher in baseball, makes receiving a strong department, and Pat Corrales provides abla relief.

The infield is sound defensively with Lee May at first, Tommy Helms at second and Tony Perez at third. Short is open, but there are qualified candidates in seasoned Woody Woodward and youngsters Dave Chaney, Frank Duffy and Days Concepcion.

Pete Rose, twice-in-a-row National League batting champion, and rising Bobby Tolan lend distinction to the outfield Two high-rated rookies, Bernie Carbo and Angel Bravo, will contend for the right-field job. Ted Savage, young Clyda Ma-shore and Hal McRae also are race. It has possibly quality pit-ehing, at least on top, and a burgeoning attack. Harry Walker, a moving, dynamic manager is quite optimistic.

The Astros have yoong pitching aces in Larry Dierker and Don Wilson, a third potential star in Tom Griffin and a solid seasoned starter in Denny Lemaster. There may be a depth problem. There isn't too much behind these good front-liners and the bull pen is not distin-guished. Jim Ray, Bob Watkins and Scipio Spinks are the other starting candidates. The chief bull-pen candidates are Fred Gladding, Jack DiLauro and Dan Osinski, unrostered. In John Edwards, the Astros have one of baseball's fine defensive eatchers the set assort-ed fielding records last season1 and, behind him. there is a high-rated prospect, Bob Wat-kins, who hits.

If he gets back on the beam personally, Joe Pepitone, from the Yankees, could give the infield a lift at first. Big John Mayberry, a power-hitting rockle-physical from Delection obtained from Detrait, is an other prospect. Joe Morgan at second, Denis Menke at short and Doug Rader at third are all cound and have offensive recommendations. Added re-serve strength would be wel-

Jim Wynn in center, who has speed and power, is the bell-wether of a good group. Jesus Alou and Tommy Davis, added last year, add quality, although both have declined from their peaks. Norm Müler figures in the picture, as does power-hitting Keith Lampard and, possibly, Pepitonc.
The Astros could be a team to watch. San Diego Padres Manager Prestoo Gomez feels confident the Padres can win 70 games, which would be a sharp rise from last year's malden bag of 52 (which, incidentally, matched the victory total of the Montreal Expos the other National League expansion team). Maybe so. The Padres have made obvious gains in some departments. But they still have a long way to go.

The Padres have no illusions of a blue-ribbon pitching staff but look to competent performance from Clay Kirby. Al Santorini, Pat Dobson, Dick Kelly, Ron Herbel and Tommie Sisk, as starters, and Jim Bald-schun, Billy McCool. Tom Dukes and rookie Dave Roberts, in the bull pen. Naturally, more optop quality and depth would be somewhat dubious. Nate Colbert is a likely starter at first as are Dave Campbell from the Tigers, at second, and Bob Etheridge from the Clants, at third. Tommy Dean and José Arcia are the leading shortstop prospects. Also in the scramble are Roberto Pena, Van Kelly, Ed Spiezo and Francisco Libran and Rafael Robles, rookies who are probably still a year or two

The Padres also are unsettled in the outfield. Ollie Brown, rated as a potential star, is a virtual sure regular. Clarence Gaston and Ivan Murrell also could be starters. Al Ferrara, Jerry Morales, Larry Stahl and rookies Jim Williams and Andy Finlay also will get

The Midi Is a Hoax

WASHINGTON - We are told by those people who make the fashion rules that hemlines are going down this year whether anybody likes it or not. The so-called midlskirt will replace the miniskirt, and there isn't a darn thing men can do But there is

ica, this group Buchwald has vowed to destroy the midi and all it represents.

The president of the Leg Men of America is Mr. Gordon Manning, who received me in his basement office with a large wludow overlooking the side-

Mr. Manning said, "It's outrageous. The midi is an affront to every Leg Man in the country."
"How many Leg Men would you say there are in the na-tiou at this moment?" I asked. There are at the present time 61,935,263 men who could qualify as Leg Men, not count-ing our armed forces abroad. These men represent every economic, religious and cultural group in the nation, and they have no intention of standing by and seeing hemlines go down below the knees."

But what can they do?" "We are serving notice through the press media that if women go along with this ridiculous fad, they will lose the interest and admiration of the majority of the male population in the United States." That's a tough threat."

"We intend to stand by it, of explaining to do." "Mr. Manning, if your no-look campaign succeeds and all the Leg Men in America refuse to eye any female wearing a midi, how long do you think it will take to get women back to the mini?"

"Not very long. Once a woman realizes that no one is looking at her, she will immediately lose interest in the midi-length hemline. To speed up the process the Leg Men America will finance instant shearing booths in all the major cities where a woman can stop and have her midi cut off to mini length painlessly and free

The Floundering American Symphonies

By Howard Taubman

NEW YORK, March 11 (NYT).—At least eight of America's 28 major symphony orchestras are in serious financial trouble, and many of the others will he hefore the end of next year. At least a dozen of about 60 other orchestras with smaller budgets are in danger, and many more of these ensembles will be in difficulties in 1971. The crisis of the orchestras, which in number and quality have represented a remarkable cultural phenomenon in the United States, is exemplified by the National Symphony in Washington.

1Yesterday the federal government released 5106,000 to a dozen symphony orchestras and opera companies, includ-ing $100,000 for the National Symphony. Grants are also going to orchestras in Buffalo, Cincinnati, Denver, San Francisco, Utah, St. Louis and California, as well as to opera companies in Min-neapolis, Brookline, Mass., Philadelphia and Seattle.] Fearful that the National Symphony will be completely out of funds by next month, its president, Lloyd Symington, has initiated an emergency appeal for $400,000 with the warning that this sum must he "either in hand or realistically in sight by March 31" or the 1970 summer season and the entire future of the orchestra would be in jeopardy.

To dramatize the urgeucy of the need.
President Nixon has agreed to meet tomorrow at the Shoreham Hotel with representatives of large corporations. He is expected to appeal for their support of the orchestra's drive.

Other Commitments

The reasons for American orchestras' headaches include musicians' demands for more money, competition from popular entertainment media and decisions by philanthropists that the nation's slums, for example, deserve a higher priority than orchestras do.

In Rochester, an intensive campaign in raise $587,000 for the city's Philharmonic fell short by more than $180,000. Thomas H. Miller, president of the orchestra and a vice-president of Eastman Kodak, said that no Philharmonic campaign in the orchestra's 47-year history had drawn so much widespread public support and that past maintenance fund goals had been exceeded by more

In Buffalo, where the Philharmonic was on the verge of immediate collapse, it was rescued several weeks ago for the remainder of the season by an appropriation of $260,000 from the Eric County

In Dallas, the manager of the symphony,

 Nixon expected to make an appeal on behalf of the National Symphony.

• U.S. government releases $706,000 to orchestras and opera companies.

Howard Jarrett, observed that the orchestra might get by this season despite a defirit of about $700,00 but "could not make out next year unless we get a new and large infusion of money."

The Chicago Symphony Orchestra, which with the New York Philharmonic, Philadelphia, Boston and Cleveland orchestras make np the Big Five, had a net deficit for the 1968-69 season of $557,441 after raising more than $1 million in various ways to help an operating deficit of more than $1.5 million.

According to John S. Edwards, manager, the Chicago orchestra's unrestricted endowment of more than $7 million has been whittled down to $250,000 in the last ten years, with more than $3 mil-lion going into the renovation of the ensemble's home, Orchestra Hall, Founded in 1891, the Chicago orchestra has also built up a restricted endowment of more than $6 million. The income from this fund is not available for operating expenses, but only for auch purposes as a junior ensemble, music education, scholarships, pensions and other employee benefits.

Among the major orchestras with serious problems are those in Kansas City. New Orleans and San Antonio. Among the ensembles with smaller hudgets there are difficulties in Fort Wayne, Ind., Hartford, Louisville, Nashville, Oakland, Oklahoma City, Pheoenix, San Diego. Savannah, Syracuse and Toledo. In Jacksonville, Fla., the orchestra, after a dispute with the musicians, canceled the 1969-70

Amyas Ames, president of the New York Philharmonic and head of an ad hoc committee representing the country's orchestras, has declared that many ensembles will be in danger of collapse if they do not get government help. W. McNeil Lowry, vice-president of the Ford Foundation and chief of its human-ities and arts division. Is somewhat more optimistic. The foundation set up challenge grants in 1966 amounting to $82 million for 61 orchestras and provided additional support for maintenance drives for five years, and Mr. Lowry has kept close watch on the country's orchestral

Inflation has been blamed for many of the orchestras' troubles, and it has intensified the crisis. But it is only partly

A key factor has been the drive by orchestral players for higher salaries, improved fringe benefits and longer seasons. Threats of strikes by union negotiators have been frequent, and in the last three years there have been strikes in Chicago, Cleveland, Baltimore, St. Louis, San Diego, Cincinnati, Washing-ton, Rochester and Kansas City.

Annual Earnings

The musicians and their union representatives argue that even with longer seasons and higher salaries, their earnings in some cities are far below stan-dards for professionals in other fields. Thus, in Rochester, the minimum annual earnings are $7,560 a season and in Indianapolis $5,775 a season.

Even with occasional extras and with additional jobs such as teaching, musiclans complain that they do not earn enough to support their families, let extras as their children's higher ednoa-

The orchestral future is clouded, if not all dark, according to Richard H. Wangerin, president of the American Symphony Orchestra League, for other reasons. American orchestras, he said, have virtually been priced ont of the recordmaking field, thanks to the last contract negotiated by the American Federation of Musicians.

Mergers of orchestras to establish regional ensembles are being considered. Mr. Miller, the Rochester Philharmonic president, said a regional orchestra of the highest caliber to serve Rochester, Buffalo, Syracuse, Ithaca, Elmira, Jamestown, Utica and western New York would make sense. There have been other merger discussions between the orchestras of St. Louis and Kansas City, Indianapolis and Louisville, Indianapolis and Cincinnati, Los Angeles and San Diego, Dallas and Fort Worth, Tulsa and Oklahoma City. The only merger that has taken place has brought together the community orchestras of St. Petersburg and Tampa, and these Florida towns are contiguous.
